

Notes of Sharing

Charity Platt wrote:

I have never had breast cancer. I hope the bset for those who have or who did. Good luck in all you do Remember, God will always be there.

Carmen from GA.wrote:

Since my struggle I'am completely moved by others and their ongoing efforts to fight against this disease. On the wings of hope is a foundation My best friend and I founded last year to spread awareness to young women everywhere. I love this website and the energy it holds. If no one has told you lately thanks for all you do. Hope your day is Joyful.

LuAnn Nichols wrote:

I luv your website. I am a fan.

Tabath Day wrote:

Thanks for all that you do

Donna Brasher wrote:

Lve this site....my mother died of breast cancer in 2001

Jenny LeBlanc wrote:

My mom lost her best friend to breast cancer. When they found it, it was in stage 4 she went very fast. we miss her so much. I have have lost many people to , but she is the only on to Brest cancer. thanks for all ya'll are doing.

Theresa Diamond wrote:

What a great inspiration. In my family we have had 4 generations of women with breast cancer ranging in age from 33 to 70. Everyone needs to know how important self examinations are and to never ignore any change. Keep up the good work!

Toby Scarbrough wrote:

I think you are doing a nice job by spreading the word on whats happening and keeping people aware.

Lisa Bazinet wrote:

Gotta Luv the Girls

Theresa Hammonds wrote:

I love your page!!! Thanks for caring!!!

Kaivan Sadrnia posted on our Facebook page:

We are sponsoring Pink Hair For Hope and it is going fab! So far we have raised $130 in extensions and we are just starting! The actual event is Sept 12th. I hope to see everyone there!

Mark J. Arthur posted:

I work in Home health Care and we have a boutique at our store and everyone there supports the cause...

Maria T. Paluchowski posted:

Very informative site.

LaKeta Briggins posted:

I lost a dear loved one a little over a year ago. She was a survivor and fought a strong fight for eight years. She's with God but her spirit lives within those that loved her just as much as she loved them. RIP baby girl because you will always... and forever be my ANGEL!!! I LOVE YOU AND I MISS YOU SOOO MUCH!!! In Loving Memory of Miss Patrice Andrea Carter. Read More

It is so nice to know that someone took time enough to offer support. It has been a struggle trying to move on without my loved one, but that's just me being selfish because she's in a much better place. I wish it was a way to find a cure instead of just treatments. That's just my opinion! To all others who have lost a loved one to breast cancer, may God bless you and your families and you all are always in my prayers. I pray for your strength as well. God Bless!

Ashley Nicole responded to a status "Feel'em Touch'em & Check'em, They Are Your Girls" See babe! I told you I'm supposed to do that!! ;)

Terri Diamond posted:

This journey is not an easy one, but the women that I know who have fought this fight are the strongest women I know. In my family there have been 8 women (4 generations) who have fought hard, some are still fighting. And, last night I lost a friend to breast cancer. Don't EVER give up the fight!

Althena Smith posted:

Got a call from the hospital yesterday, they want me to have some digital scan instead of a regular mammo'. does anyone know what this new scan is, and what makes it better than the old smash your girls between two plates. I have had the ultrasound, and the original mammo, now this! And they tell you not to worry!!!! How do you not?

Tom Sprague posted:

Hi. God bless you all! I am a surgical technologist, since 71. and have helped with this care from first biopsy to the reconstructin surgery, in a high school class of 25, here in Maine, 4 of my classmates have had breast cancer, this seems way above the norm. My prayers are with you all.

Also says that as a nudist, and proud member of aanr, i have seen and met several women who have opted for reconstructive surgery and several who have not. Both wear the superficial scars of survival proudly and through the naturist community are ab...le to heal the invisible scares through the love respect acceptance and support of their naturist families. You all rock.

Toby Scarbrough posted:

my grandmother had breast cancer had them removed and died two or three years later. I just wish we could do more but sometimes its not enough!!!

Kathleen M. Steinwald posted:

TOUGH ENOUGH TO WEAR PINK...A WONDERFUL IDEA...

LuAnn Nichols posted:

I have had 3 friends who has had breast cancer. My best friend Karen had IBC she passed away at the age of 40 to young. My best Kelli is 2 years out great. Sandee was diagnosed in Feb of this year she is a stage 3. Her mother is a 10 yearsurvior. Sandee... is 47 years old .I am a very big supptort of the Komen foundation. I raise a lot of money for our walk for the cure. I hope we will find a cure soon!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

Bonnie Stewart posted:

I was diagnosed with breast cancer in 2006, had a mastectomy on the right side in 2007, had no chemo or radiation, but am on Tamoxifen, now I am just about done my reconstruction, I am only 47 year old.

Kim Long-Mestre posted:

thank u for sharing ur story i had a scare a month ago . actually was at the surgeons on my birthday , i am still bruised from the surgery but it turned out to be ok, i had felt a lump but my mammo was negative and the ultrasound set off a tone of red lights but like i said all turned out well . self examination is the way to go !
